

I would be disgusted with the FCC and with the NAB if an attempt was made to eliminate and/or restrict satellite radio. Music, talk and entertainment is now via satellite available to me that is available no other way. I have children and I have them listen to classical, blues, jazz and other forms of music that are just not available on local radio channels. The descent music I can get from the regular radio stations in my area is usually from a weak station filled with static and poor reception. My other choices on regular radio include rap and hip hop which I not only find irritating and degrading to women but, it is also violent and filled with sexual innuendo. If not for satellite my kids would pretty much listen to no music other than rap and therefore be influenced strongly by the gang culture. There are a few good rock and easy listening stations if you don't mind 50% of your listening to be disturbed by commercials and listening to the same songs over and over and over again. I pay a subscription rate for my privilege to listen to quality music and entertainment of my choice. If you want to have a cause or put a ban on anything maybe you should ban government trying to make my choices for me and others. I thought I lived in the USA and whatever happened to freedom of speech?
